

Stephen Blair is a Visiting Assistant Professor of Classics at Wake Forest, specializing in ancient Roman historical literature. Some of the questions that motivate his work are how historical genres shape narrative content, what separates “historical” narration from “antiquarian” description, why historians rationalize myths, and how ancient writers imagine antiquity as a means of reflecting on the present. His other interests include pastoral poetry, reception of the Classical tradition, Greek and Roman lyric, and playing the mandolin.

Visiting Assistant Professor

STEPHEN
BLAIR